Something Wrong Somewhere

—a dozen symptoms tell you so. Disordered stomach, unstrung nerves and loss of appetite; a feeling of indifference for the world and everybody in it, including yourself; eruptions that try to force the "badness" out through the skin all tell their tale.

It's Your Blood

that's raising all this disturbance. You'd turn away in disgust from a polluted stream of water, but you'll let your blood—the food of your vital organs—remain in just this condition. Don't do it; take

Brown's Iron Bitters

It will cleanse your system of the cause of these petty sufferings and fill your veins with new and lively blood, rich in nourishment.

Brown's Iron Bitters is pleasant to take. It will not stain the teeth nor cause constipation. See the red crossed lines on the wrapper.

WONDERS OF LABOR.

Ten Remarkable Works in Masonry and Engineering.

The Stone Trade News considers the ten most remarkable works of human labor:

First.—The pyramids of Egypt, the largest of which, near Cairo, known as the great pyramid, built by Cheops, king of Egypt, took 350,000 men 20 years to build.

Second.—The artificial reservoir—Lake Mooris—built by Amenemha of the twelfth dynasty, which serves to store up the waters of the Nile during the season of floods and distribute them over the land during the dry season. Its circumference was 5,600 furlongs, and on its being allowed to fall into ruin the fertility of the region became to a serious extent a thing of the past.

Third.—The Taj Mahal, a tomb erected at Agra, in Hindustan, by Shah Jehan, over his queen, Noor Jehan. It is built of the purest white marble, and yet seems so airy that when seen from a distance it is like a fabric of mist and sunbeams, with its great dome soaring up, a silvery bubble about to burst in the sun, and even after you have touched it and climbed to its summit you almost doubt its reality. It cost over $3,000,000.

Fourth.—The temple of Baalbek, in the erection of which stones 62 feet long, 20 feet broad and 15 feet thick have been used—more prodigious masses than have ever elsewhere been moved by human power and much exceeding in size the stones used in the pyramids.

Fifth.—The temple of Karnak, described by Fergusson as the noblest work of architectural magnificence ever produced by the hand of man. It covers twice the area of St. Peter's, at Rome, and undoubtedly is one of the finest buildings in the world.

Sixth.—The great wall of China, 1,230 miles in length. It is 20 feet in height and in thickness 25 feet at the base and 15 feet at the top.

Seventh.—The Eiffel tower, erected in the grounds of the 1889 Paris exhibition, 984 feet high.

Eighth.—The Suez canal, with 88 miles of waterway, connecting the Mediterranean and the Red seas, and forming the principal route to India. It cost more than $17,000,000, and 172,003 out of 399,677 shares were purchased by and belong to the British government.

Ninth.—The railway bridge (the largest cantilever bridge in the world) over the Forth, with two spans each of 1,700 feet, erected at a cost of nearly $4,000,000.

Tenth.—The leaning tower of Pisa, which deviates 13 feet from the perpendicular.

The Adventures of Rochefort.

M. Henri Rochefort has written a characteristic introduction to his "Adventures of My Life." He describes the extraordinary vicissitudes of his existence—one day a minister, with enormous power; a month or two later on his way to a convict settlement on the other side of the world. But it is the ups and downs in the lives of others, and notably in the lives of great painters, that Rochefort depicts in the most interesting way. He lived in the same house with Corot and has seen the great master tramping in rage upon the pictures he could find no one to purchase. He met Millet once, in the street Notre Dame de Lorette, at a little dealer's, to whom he had just offered a picture for 300 francs which Rochefort has since seen sold for 87,000 francs. He publishes a letter of Millet containing the following passage: "I dare not pass before the butcher's. There are not 2 shillings in the house, and this has been my condition for some 20 years." Laughing at the English love of hunting and shooting, Rochefort tells how he used to go out hunting each morning in the London picture dealers' shops and how he recently unearthed a superb Geraint, which was given to him for a mere nothing.—Saturday Review.

Thought Without Reverence.

"Shall your science proceed in the small chink lighted or even oil lighted underground worship of logic alone, and man's mind become an arithmetical mill, whereof memory is the hopper, and mere tables of sines and tangents, codification and treatises of what you call political economy are the meal?" And what is that science, which the scientific head alone, were it screwed off, and, like the doctor's in the Arabian tale, set in a basin to keep it alive, could prosecute without shadow of a heart, but one other of the mechanical and mental handiworks for which the scientific head, having a soul in it, is too noble an organ? I mean that thought without reverence is barren, perhaps poisonous, at best dies, like cookery, with the day that called it forth; does not live, like sowing in successive tilths and wider spreading harvests, bringing food and plenteous increase to all time.—Carlyle.

Polite Reproof.

A lady once ventured to publicly reprove a well known London society man for his overfondness of good living. The gentleman made himself conspicuous by the way he gorged himself at a dinner to which he and others of the upper ten had been invited. To make matters worse, he was sufficiently unwise or thoughtless enough to attempt to excuse himself with the remark that "In eating well I praise the food," thereby using a well known quotation.

It was an opportunity not to be lost by the somewhat disgusted and witty lady sitting at his elbow.

"Ready, sir," she observed, with a sweet smile, "you should not carry praise to the point of flattery."

Her Query.

The Boston Budget tells a story of a little girl who went to church on a recent Sunday with her mother, a devout member and regular attendant of the Episcopal church. The little one sat very quiet and demure through all the long service, but her quick little ears and bright little brain were not so quiet as was indicated. After the service she looked up into her mother's face, and, "Mamma," she asked earnestly, "they say: 'Ah men' so much. Why don't they say, 'Ah lady'?"

Notice to the Conductor.

Chicago Passenger—I say, conductor, did you notice my ticket?
Conductor—Um! I don't remember it, sir.
"My ticket is for St. Louis."
"Well?"
"Well, I don't want you to forget to stop there, that's all."—New York Weekly.

The best rules to form a young man are to talk little, to hear much, to reflect alone upon what has passed in company, to distrust one's own opinions and value others that deserve it.—Sir W. Temple.

We have no right to say that the universe is governed by natural laws, but only that it is governed according to natural laws.—Carpenter.
